Dear Mr. Graham,

Re: Application No. 10/690,280

I have rewritten the claims to conform to the requirements as set forth in your communication Office Action Summary, Art Unit:3711, Date 5/10/04. I have had a chance to review my original claims and now understand your comments. I was trying to be to explicit and put in to much detail. I was not trying to claim for the leather tip or the screw joint connection, in fact, I identified that those items were in common use on Cues in my submission under History Of The Cue. I was using the reference to identify the difference between a Shaft Assembly and a Butt Assembly.

I did not copy or modify Davies Cue. In fact when I looked for any relevant patents, I did not even know that a patent by Davies existed. Davies patent uses nine ( 9 ) separate pieces and cut tapers on the core.

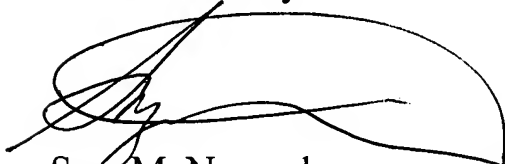

My patent application uses one solid piece, with grooves cut full length at the same depth to achieve a straight taper on the exterior inlays for both appearance and strength, much like a pillar on a building.

The following information is attached per your request.

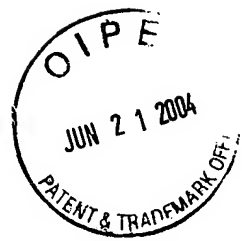

- Page two (2) of the original BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE INVENTION added a clarification to the method of incorporating the inlays.
- Pages 5,6 & 7 Claims rewritten per your request so they were explicit.
- Declaration duly signed and witnessed that an original copy of the Canadian Patent papers application is enclosed.
- Twelve (12) pages of the Canadian patent application consisting of seven (7) pages original application, plus correspondence re claims and a copy of the FILING CERTIFICATE dated 2003/02/03

I trust that this completes the information you requested and clarifies that I was not including the leather tip and screw connection as part of my invention.

Yours sincerely

Sam M. Nazaruk

To Whom It May Concern.

The undersigned Sam Miksym Nazaruk swears this oath that the attached is a true copy of the original documents issued to the Canadian Patent Office.

Attention: Commissioner of Patents

I appreciated the courtesy letter submitted by your Patent Formalities Clerk, Ms. Carol Howard. I have completed the claims statement and it is attached, see pages 1 & 2 Claims.

Please note, my original letter with the patent application was dated, I had mistakenly put the date below the return address. I have no problem with the official filing date of December 13, 2002.

Yours truly,

Sam M. Nazaruk
